Two years ago, West Germa-ny's booming economy was still being described as a "miracle"and was held up as a model for other countries. Now, however, a cloud of gloom obscures the economic horizon — and the polizical climate, too, has changed. These and other aspects of West Germany today are examined in Part 1 of a three-part special supplement - Focus on West Germany, 1981 - beginning tomorrow. Page 7S.

Polish Union Suspends Walkout In Partial Accord With Regime

The Associated Press WARSAW - The independent union Solidarity on Monday suspended a nationwide general strike pending a final decision of its nadonal coordinating commission Tuesday, union leaders said.

"Tomorrow we go to work," said Anrzej Gwiazda, second in command of the union's estimated 10 million members.

Mr. Gwiazda made the announcement in a televised statement after nearly seven hours of talks between union leader Lech Walesa and Mieczyslaw Rakowski, a deputy premier who had said the threatened strike could be "catastrophic" for Poland.

"Common sense and modera-tion bave won," said Mr. Walesa, noting that the 55-member national commission would meet in the Baltic port city of Gdansk Tuesday afternoon.

Warning Strike

The strike threat stemmed from ngry reaction to the beating of three Solidarity members by police in Bydgoszcz March 19. There was a four-hour warning strike across Poland on Friday. The agreement, read over television by an anouncer, said the government would suspend persons responsible for the beatings after an investigation of the incident. It also said special police units were withdrawn from Bydgoszcz, some 250 kilometers northwest of War-

"The use of police was contrary to an accepted and observed political solution," the agreement said. referring to police removing Solidarity members who had refused to leave a government meeting. But it also said their refusal to leave had provided "certain justification of the action."

Other points included: • Work on a new union statute codifying aspects of last summer's agreements will be accelerated.

• The question of registration of an independent farmers' union will be studied by a parliamentary commission.

• The government will send a delegation to study farmers's grievances that sparked a sit-in three weeks ago in Bydgoszcz. The agreement stipulated that a special government commission would study union demands for ending prosecution of dissidents, and the government would grant workers full rather than half strike pay for last Friday's stoppages if Tuesday's walkont was called off. Mr. Walesa said he was satisfied with "70 percent of the agreement," but that the union did not get all it wanted. Warsaw Pact military maneuvers continued in and around Poland, an ominous hackground to the talks.

The Soviet news agency Tass uoted a Polish Communist Party official as saying, regarding a gen-eral strike. 'Our country has no reserves that would enable it to survive this catastrophe economically. Therefore, the structure of our state and its very survival are at stake." The official Kazimierz Barcikowski, spoke at a meeting of the party's Central Committee, which gave its ruling Politburo a vote of confidence to deal with the situation after stormy debate. The union had threatened an indefinite general strike starting at 6 a.m. Tuesday.

"We face a general strike with effects that may be catastrophic," said Mr. Rakowski, deputy premier and chief lahor troub-leshooter for the government in comments reported by the Polish news agency PAP from the Central Committee session.

"The general strike would be the threshold of a precipice," he was quoted as saying. Mr. Rakowski told reporters before the meeting with Mr. Walesa: The orime consideration is to remove reasons for the enormous tension in the country as a result of the Bydgoszcz conflict."

The Warsaw radio broadcast excerpts of a speech made at the party meeting by Internal Affairs Minister Miroslav Milewski. He said people "who hanker after power and are irresponsible in their actions" have penetrated Solidarity.

"The time has come to curb the widespread lawlessness and lack of observance of the law," he said.

In addition to stating its support of the Communist leadership, the committee called on government officials to meet with workers in their factories and told the workers to "put an end to strikes." PAP

The statement also called for an explanation of the Bydgoszcz incident.

The radio said the Central Committee's resolution called on party members "to counteract the influence of the enemies of Socialism on individual cells of Solidarity, and to carry out consistent coun-teraction against the transformation of this union into a political organization causing a state of social tension and anxiety. Rumors circulated that the entire 10-member Politburo had re-signed. But Warsaw Radio said three members resigned and the committee rejected their resigna-

The three were Stefan Olszowski, Roman Ney and Tadeusz Grabski, all apparent foes of the labor movement. The hroadcast said Mr. Olszowski accused Solidarity of maneuvering to seize power, Mr. Grabski claimed the federation was supporting anarchy and Mr. Nev demanded renegotiation of agreements won by the strikers last summer.

The committee also heard from members who criticized the party leadership's bandling of the situation and called for concessions to Solidarity, PAP reported.

The committee meeting came as Moscow made its grimmest public assessment yet of the Polish crisis, saving the country was tottering on the brink of anarchy.

Concerning the Warsaw Pact maneuvers, the East German news agency ADN said the Communist allies sent in new units to take part in the 10-day-old spring war games in Poland. Czechoslovakia and East Germany.

The maneuvers reportedly have been extended because of the Polish situation. But in Washington, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said moderate elements in the Polish government seem to be surviving and intervention by the Red Army is "neither imminent or incvitable."

Who wouldn't want to be in your shoes? Especially when those feet will be taking you to the famous cheese markets, flower auctions, gorgeous canals, windmills, and a Van Gogh or two. So share it all with your family and friends back home. But before you make that call, here are some guilder-saving tips. SAVE ON SURCHARGES

In most countries there's no threeminute minimum on self-dialed calls. So if your hotel offers International Dialing from your room, place a short call home and have them call you back. The surcharge on short calls is low. And you pay for the callback from the States with dollars, not local currency, when you get your next home or office phone bill.

SAVE THESE OTHER WAYS

Paris Jews Report Calm as Attacks Drop

PARIS - As he started to walk into one of Paris' synagogues on a recent Sabbatb evening, a worshipper was stopped at the door by a sentry who pointed to a black satchet slung over the man's shoulder.

"I'm sorry," the guard said, "but I'll have to search your bag."

The encounter is an example of the precautions taken by authorities and the Jewisb community six months after an unsolved syna-gogue bombing that police suspect was the work of foreign terrorists.

The bombing occurred during a wave of anti-Semitie attacks in France that included arsonist strikes at kosber restaurants and vandalism at Jewish-owned stores and Jewisb graves.

Jewish organizations in Paris are quick to point out that the number of attacks bas decreased markedly since last fall and say that "calm" has returned to the Jewish community.

Zionist Warns of Attempt To 'Delegitimize' Israel

Crucial factors in a darkening of the outlook for Israel, Mr. Dulzin went on, are a swift growth around the world of Arab influence through oil and money. a resurgence of anti-Semitism in many countries - "even where there are no more Jews, like Poland" - and increasing attention in many nations to demands by Palestinians for a West Bank state.

Among a few bright spots for 1srael at the moment, he said, are the Reagan administration's emphasis on "the strategic importance of Israel" in the Middle East, Israel's progress with Egypt toward good relations under the 1979 peace treaty and new unity among Jews as pressures grow,

Wriggling Ahead on China

Under cover of the Great Haig Flap, the Reagan administration has deftly taken a significant turn in foreign policy. It has signaled China quietly that it wants to continue the Nixon-Ford-Carter-policy that is cuphemistically known as "normalizing relations." That was the essence of the private assurances President Reagan gave to China's envoy to the United States - a message lately reinforced by Gerald Ford's goodwill visit to Peking. None of this would be news were it not for Mr. Reagan's campaign utterances on China, which caused some of his political allies to lobby for a provocative new gesture toward Taiwan. Most Americans, accepting the strategic value of a stronger Chinese connection, have welcomed the developing ties with a once closed Communist system. But Candidate Reagan all hut shrugged off the benefit while ignoring China's evolution. And his administration is still stuck with his vague promise to upgrade relations with Taiwan.

Wisely, however, the Reagan team has now dropped the talk about a "two Chinas" policy and reaffirmed the terms by which relations with the mainland were reopened. The key formula was agreement that there is only one China, with the tacit understanding that Peking would not use force against Taiwan. Since even the Taiwan regime claims to speak for one China, this was a token payment for a major gain. As Peking was forewarned, the United States felt entitled to continue to look after Taiwan's security and prosperity through "unofficial" ties.

Even military aid to Taiwan is thus not in question. But sending highly sophisticated weaponry is. General Dynamics, perhaps even more than the Taiwanese, has been promoting the sale of an advanced F-16 fighter known as the FX, a weapon that is a generation ahead of mainland planes. As a matter of right, Peking has no hasis for objecting to a "defense" arrangement between the United States and Taiwan. But that does not make the deal wise. What may make commercial sense for a single company may be a very poor diplomatic hargain. The U.S. interest lies in promoting gradual, peaceful "normalization" between Peking and Taiwan. A pro-vocative arms deal would impede a process that has in fact already begun. In the symbolically important field of sports, Taiwan has just retreated from a stubbornly held position. Only last year, it preferred being excluded from the Winter Olympics at Lake Placid to surrendering the right to carry a Republic of China flag into the Games. In Geneva the other day, it was quietly announced that Taiwan has now agreed to use another flag and anthem so it can reioin the Olympics.

Such diplomatic ruses can be distasteful, and not just to Mr. Reagan. The Taiwan Relations Act of 1979 involved a ritual humiliation of the island's government by specifying that the United States now has ties only with "the people of Taiwan." Yet Peking seized on this symbol to yield substantially on its prior position, and accepted continuation of the U.S. security guarantee for Taiwan. The island is secure without another new aircraft. It would be folly to test this compromise with a peripheral arms deal.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

From the Fed, a Warning

• The Federal Reserve System speaks softly, but the message deserves an attentive hear-ing. Anthony Solomon, the president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, delivered a carefully phrased caution the other day on the subject of inflation. He fully endorsed President Reagan's economic goals, but he expressed the financial world's rising uneasiness about the manner in which the administration is pursuing them.

In its more lyrical manifestations, the supply-side theory holds that tight control of the money supply can, alone, end inflation. The Federal Reserve is in charge of the money supply, and this kind of talk dismays it profoundly because it implies that nothing else - taxes, deficits, wages - makes any difference at all.

Mr. Solomon was responding to a series of developments beginning last month, when the president published his economic program. People immediately noted that its monetary and fiscal positions were inconsistent. The monetary policy was to be tight, with less growth of the money supply next year than this year, but the fiscal policy was to remain expansive. While the administration is cutting the budget, it also wants to cut revenues, now and far into the future, with its three years of reductions in tax rates. The hear about the Congressional Budget Office's estimate that the deficit was understated by perhaps $22 billion. If correct, that would mean a deficit next year that was moving, not slightly downward, hut sharply upward. Meanwhile, the administration is stepping up its campaign for those three successive years of tax cuts.

There's much more to inflation than budget deficits alone, and Mr. Solomon also emphasized the importance of international competition in holding down prices. It was an obvious reference to the continuing debate within the administration over automobiles from Japan.

To put the point more hluntly than Mr. Solomon did, monetary policy belongs to the Federal Reserve and the Federal Reserve is determined to hold to its targets. If Mr. Reagan loses control of the budget deficit, the immediate result will be soaring and swooping interest rates in the style of Mr. Carter's last year in office, If Mr. Reagan tries to ease himself out of a political dilemma by resorting to quotas on Japanese cars. inflation will leap ahead regardless of monetary policy. Theoretically, a rigid monetary policy could eventually quench the inflation. But it is questionable whether American soci-

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Tricky Job of Unemployment

In an economy as fast-moving and cyclical as that of the United States, unemployment compensation cases the personal hardship of worker layoffs and promotes labor mobility. By international standards, the United States is neither careful nor generous in its treatment of experienced workers. Benefits provided to unemployed skilled workers are relatively low, and little responsibility is placed on employers to maintain employment and ease worker adjustment to industrial change.

Unemployment benefits are, nonetheless, a big-ticket hudget item. Costs this year are estimated to exceed $25 billion, and ontlays remain high even when the economy is booming. Partly this is because benefits are extended hroadly - and frequently for long periods of time - to many people who are voluntarily out of work (retirees, for example, or short-term workers who have returned to school or working at home) or who are chronically unable to find or hold stable employment

The tricky joh of unemployment-benefit policy-makers is thus to provide adequate compensation to allow worker adjustment to necessary economic change without, at the same time, interfering with labor markets by promoting worker turnover, increasing payroll costs and prolonging unemployment. The Reagan administration's proposals address only the second part of this concern. The primary aim of the proposals is to cut back on the numbers and kinds of workers receiving unemployment benefits for over six months. These "extended" benefits, partly financed by the federal government, are now paid in individual states with relatively high unemployment rates and in all states when national unemployment is high. While the particulars of the plan are worth debating, the administration is on relatively firm and familiar ground here.

Far more questionable are the restrictions proposed for the state-financed unemployment benefit programs for the short-term unemployed. The administration's plan would require that persons receiving benefits for more than three months accept jobs paying no more than the value of their currentbenefits. Frequently that is less than half their previous pay. Forcing these workers into less skilled jobs will simply lower their productivity and push less skilled workers out of employment altogether.

Compared with other industrialized nations, the United States is very careless of its skilled labor force. Apart from what their previous employers may provide, experi-enced workers losing their jobs receive little help in locating new jobs, moving to them if necessary and acquiring new skills to adjust to the changing needs of industry. This kind of positive assistance - the kind provided by our ablest international competitors - not only would be fairer treatment for U.S. workers, it would also represent a more suitable policy for a government interested in promoting rapid economic growth.

U.S. Policies on Agent Orange Criticized . House Report Faults Actions in Defoliant Controversy

هكذا من الأصل

By Richard Severo New York Times Service NEW YORK - An unpublished staff report of the House Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations accuses the Veterans Administration, the Department of De-fense, the Dow Chemical Co. and a panel set up by President Carter of failures in dealing with the con-troversy over the defoliant Agent Огалее

A spokesman for the subcommittee said that the report had been prepared by the staff that existed before last November's electinn and that, without new hearings, it could not be released now by the subcommittee, which has eight new members. The report was written after the election.

Agent Orange was the code name for a defoliant sprayed by the Air Force on Vietnamese jun-gles and farmland to reduce hiding places and food for the enemy. It was a mixture of two herbicides, 2,4,5-T and 2,4-D. Both herbicides have been suspected of causing health problems, although nothing conclusive bas been proven.

Delayed Reaction

In 1978, Vietnam veterans, most of them former soldiers or Marines, began to complain of symptoms that they suspected were a delayed reaction tn their exposure stance tion relied on "inaccurate and incomplete information" when it de-nied Agent Orange claims. The Veterans Administration is accused of denying the claims of veterans "while declining to speciwhat level of scientific certainty will be required to establish the connection between Agent Orange exposure and ill health effects." A spokesman for the agency said, "We have not seen a copy of the report and are not in a position to comment on it." The spokesman added that the Agent Orange issue had "brought forth more research energy and staff attention than any other issue" that the agency had confronted in the last 15 years.

As for the Department of De-fense, the report says that in the late 1960s, after Agent Orange had been used for several years, the department "refused in the face of new, verified scientific data, to acto Agent Orange. In the last few years, bundreds knowledge that there could be a problem with Agent Orange," that

Dow Spokesman

The report accuses the Dow Chemical Co., makers of Agent Orange, of failing to "notify the Department of Defense of its awareness of the toxicity of Agent Orange or of an outbreak of illness at one of its plants in 1964."

A spokesman fnr Dow said the company had not yet seen the re-port but confirmed that in 1964 there was an outbreak of chloracne, a skin problem, at a plant in Midland, Mich., after workers were exposed to high dioxin levels in waste oil.

The spokesman said that neither the Department of Defense nor the Department of Agriculture had been nutified because the company did not begin to make Agent Orange fur the U.S. guvernment until late in 1965 and because the chloracne incident was not regarded by the company as being partic-ularly serinus. He said the compa-ny bad notified the Michigan De-University of Michigan. The spokesman added that the company continued in believe that the herbicides used in Agent Orange were safe.

Finally, the report criticizes the Interagency Wirk Group set up by President Jimmy Carter in late 1979 th facilitate a solution to the Agent Orange problem. The report says that the group largely failed to achieve any of its nbjectives. A spinkesman fur the group, which still exists, said he did not know about the report and declined to comment on its substantive points.

 The program failed to demonstrate that the workfare concept would prevent people from applying for welfare by warning that they would have to work even if they got on the rolls. Welfare applications in CWEP counties actually showed a signifi-cantly greater increase than elsewhere.

· The program failed to demonstrate that workfare pushed people who were already nn the rolls to go nff and get jobs. Actually, more people in non-CWEP counties left welfare in take jnbs than in CWEP counties (the gap narrowed in 1974), but dif-ferences were not statistically significant.

Mr. Carleson said the report made clear that many counties had entered the program halfheartedly and had done a poor jnb of administering it. Mnreover, he said, "The goal was not to have people working in CWEP; it was to encourage people to seek their own jobs" by making it clear that, whether they were off or on the rolls, they would have to work.

By this measure, be contended, the program was a success, because from 1971 to 1974 the welfare rolls statewide dropped about 300,000. Mr. Carleson con-

Similarly, he said that the number of people leaving welfare for paid work statewide (not just in CWEP areas) had climbed from 15,667 in 1971 to 75.705 in 1974, and by his calculations - which differed from those in the report - the rate was 25 percent higher in CWEP counties. Again, he said that it was hard to measure exactly bow much CWEP contributed to the statewide numbers, but he believed that the contribution was significant,

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. - A British spy was ordered to watch the development of the flying ma-chine Orville and Wilbur Wright were working on, but the agent was so inept he went to the wrong spot and missed the airplane's first

Bangladesh Given Chance of Food Success Experts Now Say Ziaur's Plan for Self-Sufficiency Is Possible

Washington Past Service " DACCA, Bangladesh - Bangladesh, once described as an international basket case by Henry A. Kissinger, has celebrated its 10th anniversary with its president proclaiming that his poor and densely populated nation will produce enough food to meet its needs by 1987

By Stuart Auerbach

"We've got to do it. It's our sur-vival," said President Ziaur Rahman, 45, who at times appears to be trying to raise his country up by the sheer force of his persuasion. He made his comments in an interview two nights before last Thursday's national day, which marks the declaration of independence from Pakistan of East Bengal, now Bangladesh

Surprisingly, many international experts here believe that Bangladesh can achieve self-sufficiency in food — if not by Mr. Zian's optimistic timetable, then soon after. Yet in many ways Bangladesh,

Little More Grain

Even if Mr. Ziaur's most optimistic projections for food produc-tion and population control were to come true by 1985, Bangla-desh's millions will get no more than an extra half ounce of grain each day. The increase will only provide 70 percent of what international experts believe is the min-imum daily food requirement.

This is mainly because Bangla desh is made up of one culture and language — Bengali, and is not composed of three or four that were melded together because of a' common Islamic faith to form Pakistan

The new feeling of guarded opti-mism about Bangladesh's future stems almost entirely from the leadership of Mr. Ziaur, a retired army general who took over a military government in 1976 and trans-formed it to civilian rule.

He lifted martial law in 1979 one of the few military rulers in the world to do so. Mr. Ziaur restored fundamental rights, freed political prisoners and held and won by a 77 percent margin election that generally were considered free and fair. He runs a one-man show, concentrating his government on rural development aimed at helping the 90 percent of the population who live in villages. His program appears to have strengthened his po-litical base among the villagers, while the increasing inflation has hurt his popularity among the small but influential middle class who live in urban areas.

His goals for the country are basic: decrease illiteracy, which is at more than 80 percent; gain self-sufficiency in food by increasing production from the present 13.1 million tons of grain a year to 20 million tons by 1985, guarantee production of 18 million tons in years with adverse weather condi-tions, and doubling of the crop in seven or eight years; and control of the burgeoning birthrate, which threatens to overwheim all Bangladesh's recent advances in develop-

Mr. Ziaur is considered the most forceful Third World head head of state in pushing population control, and this month he set a new goal of no more than one child a family. The average family now has four.

Bangladesh registers 23,000 sterilizations a month, the vast majority on women, and Mr. Ziaur would like to step that up to 100,000 a month, a goal that most experts under 15 years old, approaching childbearing age.

The acceptance is here, partly due to Mr. Ziaur's advocacy of ment hirth control during his frequent (20 a month) trips to villages, Re-portedly there is a 30 to 40 percent unmet demand for sterilizations among eligible married couples.

"Unfortunately, the demographic truth of this country is that even. 100,000 sterilizations and one child per couple isn't enough. The bomh has exploded," said a foreign population expert working here.

Nonetheless, Mr. Ziaur in a wide-ranging interview Tuesday night, held over dinner in the prosidential palace, appeared optimistic that Bangladesh could weather the population crisis through increased food production and sharp cuts in the birthrate. "We will hold the population at t00 million and then fall back," he said confidently. His planning minister, Fasihuddin Mahtab, perhaps was more re-alistic when he said, "The economy is in such a state that unless we make a major breakthrough in the next five years we are finished. With 80 percent of the people below the poverty line we are barely floating. It is survival. The alterna-tive is yearly famine."

161-year-old mammy. He outwit-ted the Boston binenoses who opposed any theatrical productions by presenting scenes from Shakespeare as moral lectures. At his New York imiseum he introduced the midget Charles S. Stratton as "Gen. Tom Thumb," the tiniest man in the world and later toured Europe with him. He imported the ust ring performer, turning soprano Jenny Lind to the United rsaults, walking the tightrope ie vocalizes, serving as the States, dubbing her "the Swedish Nightingale."

She rounded off a vivid, if occasionally stagey, impersonation with a superbly paced sleepwalk-ing scene, closing it with a secure, lingering, pianissimo high D flat. Bruson is a veteran Macbeth with his own conception of the man as essentially a weakling, and he is a past master at coloring vocal sound and shaping musical phrase to achieve telling character-ization. As he put it in an interview, the man who can express himself as Macbeth does in his concluding "Pieta, Rispetto, Amore" cannot be all bad, and Bruson made this aria the vocal high point of the performance. There were cheers for everyone at Friday's premiere, including those who had done so uniformly well in the supporting roles, but above all for Muti and the orchestra, who had shown memorably how intensity and pace can be maintained without sacrificing the nuances and shadings that mean so much to Verdi, especially in an opera as close to his heart as "Macbeth."

every minute." Even if he didn't say it, it was the philosophy of his gaudy shenanigans. He is said to have hoodwinked hicks into pay-1835, passing off an elderly black woman as George Washington's ing a dollar to see that exotic beast "egress," one of many Barnum tricketics that proved remunerative and belongs to American folklore. When he was past the age of 60 he organized a famous menagerie, circus and sideshow of freaks, which merged a decade later with the big-top spectacles of James A. Bailey.

> Mark Bramble's book for "Barnum" retells the impresario's ex-ploits lightly, fancifully and comically, set to the rousing brass-band score of the gifted musical comedy composer Cy Coleman, while the Level-Collard translation catches the drollery of Michael Stewart's lyrics.

Moreau's Barnum, though of uncertain singing voice, is other-wise an overwhelming feat of versatility - humorous, winning and charged with dynamic zest. Claudine Coster's Mrs. Barnum has grace and charm, Anne Forrez's Jenny Lind has elegance and eloquence, and Jorge Rafael struts with amusing swagger as a full-grown Tom Thumb, the diminutive size of the midget being sug-gested by a gigantic throne, an at-

of them. They were of my own fabrication, or at least the pigs were; I left their curing to the cooperative of the town of Chelsea, VL, where I then owned a farm. The quality of the pork was the result of their feeding. Comme producers could not have arrived at such fine pork and such tasty hams because of the cost of feeding them that well. I bought two piglets

This is not the fault of the meat, it is the fault of the people who produce it. It is perhaps because we are so accustomed to it in humdrum forms that we experience a sort of shock when we encounter a really superb specimen and reg-

I also bought hog mash, cooked it, and served the pigs a steaming porridge that I was almost tempted to try myself. But the crowning touch came toward the end of their short lives. My farm was overgrown with apple trees, which because of past neglect no longer produced marketable fruit but which were ringed toward autumn with windfalls. Twice a day filled two milk pails with apples and dumped them into the sty. The pork, the hams, and especially the bacon had a faint flavor of ap-

This is one of four elements I perceived as most important in enriching the flavor of any ham - what the pig eats. A second element is liberty: All great hans come from animals that have been allowed to roam freely. I will refrain from philosophizing about the effect of freedom on flavor, except to report the observed fact that ham from pigs raised economically in the modern fashion, confined in constricted stalls, cannot compare with that from pigs on open pasture or, best of all. in the woods. where they can forage for acorns, nuts, berries and similar feasts.

Leisurely Curing

The third essential ingredient is time: The curing cannot be hurried without loss of quali-ty. All the world's famous barns are cured in eisurely fashion; many of them demand a year or more to reach perfection. Modern techniques can put ham on the market a week or two after slaughtering, and it tastes like it, thin and bitter, Finally, in salt-cured hams it is important that the salt be applied sparingly. The producer tends to overdo it, for salt is the preservative; the more salt, the longer the ham ill last. But the less salt, the better the ham will taste. The art of curing ham thus consists in finding the best balance between these two relatively incompatible imperatives.

Unfortunately the processer, if he deviates from the optimum, prefers to err on the side of safety, which means giving priority to preserva-tion. The consumer would prefer that he err in the other direction, but when he does, the loss of part of his production to spoilage obliges him to mark up the price of the surviving hams. That is one reason the famous hams of the world are expensive.

Ham, strictly speaking, is the cured thigh of a pig's hind leg, but in popular parlance a cer-tain leeway is allowed. A minor deviation permits us to speak of fresh ham, though gastro-nomically, if it is fresh it isn't a ham. Slightly further from the purist's definition is the word's application to the shoulder when processed in the same fashion as the hind leg; this is more of a misuse, since for some reason the

The Cure and Feeding of Pigs to Get Better Hams front leg is somewhat less choice than the hind. The trade eases its conscience by selling the shoulder under the name of "picnic ham." The common ham, the one you usually buy, is a "short ham" for the processor; a "long ham" is cut from the carcass a little higher up. Another cut, not usually offered nowadays, lengthens the ham in the other direction by including the shin along with the thigh. This is a gammon, incompletely defined hy most modern dictionaries as meaning the shin alone. The word is more uncommon now than it was in the 16th century when the nursery rhyme was born that in its current modified form gives us:

With a rowley powley sammon and spinach Heigh-ho! says Anthony Rowley, or even in the 19th, when Charles Dickens had one of his characters exclaim, "What a world of gammon and spinnage it is, though, ain't ' Ham and spinach make an excellent comination, if you want to take the phrase literally, but when it is used to mean "nonsense" or 'bumbug" it is etymologically rather complicated. A sort of pun is involved with another meaning of "gammon." which means random chatter, especially that intended to divert or deceive.

In the United States a leg of fresh ham is divided into the shank half and the butt half: in England it is a leg of pork, which is cut into the knuckle end and the fillet of leg. The terms in German are Interschinken and its three divisions: the Oberschale, the Unterschale and the Nuss. The French use jumbon for about every thing.

Still farther from the strict definition for ham is its application to other animals than the pig. Wild boar ham may be considered as not much of a deviation, since the wild boar is classified, though not by sticklers, as a pig. This used to be a Sardinian specialty, under the name of prosciuto di cinghiale, but it is becom-ing rare, for so is the wild boar. Mutton ham, once eaten commonly in England, is a step farther away, Bear ham, obtainable in Russia, is a bop, skip and jump away, and most distant of all is France's jambon de poulet, a speciality of the city of Richelieu in the Touraine, made by boning the thigh of a large, fat chicken, replacing the bones with stuffing and then shaping it into the form of a small ham.

A great many pigs are slaughtered before they reach the age of one year, when they give tender hams of convenient size. This is what happened to my pigs, which resented it.

There is a theory that the American musical is rarely to French taste, but the 57-year-old "Rose Marie" has been a popular Paris perennial and is being revived once more at the Porte St. Martin.

Mark Bramble, who wrote the book for "Barnum," came to Paris for the opening of his show and was on his way to London, where a production of "Barnum" is being rehearsed for a June premiere When the Parisian return of "Rose Marie" was mentioned to him, he announced that he was at work on revenues of 513 billion in 1979.

Capital expenditures for energy projects, most of which was spent in the search for oil and gas in the United States, exceeded $1.3 billion. Tenneco drilled 37 net exploratory wells in 1980 with a success rate of 49 percent and 233 net development wells with a success rate of 87 percent. Its additions to oil and gas reserves equalled production for the third year in a row. The Company expects to increase energy expenditures to $1.5 billion in 1981.

Tenneco holds a strong strategic position in natural gas, both as producer and pipeliner. More than two-thirds of the Company's energy production is in the form of natural gas. And with U.S.government deregulation of this clean fuel proceeding, the Company will benefit increasingly in the future.

While Tenneco's integrated oil and natural gas pipeline operations produced 78 percent of the Company's operating income in 1980, other divisions reported improved profitability. Shipbuilding showed the most dramatic improvement and ended 1980 with a business backlog of $3.2 billion. Agriculture/ land management, packaging, and insurance also gained. Construction and farm equipment, chemicals, and automotive operations remained profitable despite the economic recession.

J. L. Ketelsen, chairman and chief executive officer, stated that continued emphasis on energy during 1981 should produce another good year with earnings up 12 to 15 percent. He said the Company expects energy progress to continue with cyclical businesses showing some recovery during the latter part of the year.

Japanese Split by Debate Over Auto Export Curbs

TOKYO - The American officials expected to come bere early next month to help resolve the problem of Japanese automobile exports will meet government and industry officials who are as divided over the issue as their counter-parts in the United States.

Far from presenting a united front often described as "Japan Incorporated" in the West, the government and the automobile in-dustry bere are divided over what approach to take on the subject of car shipments to the United States, government officials and company executives said.

"Kasumigaseki is just like the Reagan Cabinet," said one former official of the Ministry of Interna-tional Trade and Industry. Kasumigaseki is the area of Tokyo in which major government minis-tries are located, and the former official was referring to a split be-tween free trade advocates and protectionists among Reagan cabinet members, as well as the debate about which administration official should lead the trade talks. An 11-year-old partnership be-tween Ford and Nissan Motor Co. and Toyo Kogyo Co. will end Wednesday when Ford sells its 50 percent interest in the Japan Automatic Transmission Co., formed by the three companies to produce automatic transmissions. The plant, 90 miles southwest of Tokyo, delivered 200,000 units to Ford's North American automotive operations in 1977-79, but sold the bulk of the production to Nis-san, Toyo Kogyo and Subaru. Roland Williams, a Ford spokesman in Dearborn, Mich., said that Nissan had requested

Ford sell its interest. Ford said it agreed to sell out to its partners because it did not want to be a minority stockholder and because its future product plans did not require the use of the particular transmissions produced at the Japanese plant.

Meanwhile, Ford officials demed published reports that the company has reached general agreement with Toyota to jointly produce vehicles in the United States. Newsweek reported that Ford and Toyota have decided on the basic type of auto they plan to produce together, but are keeping that a secret until the joint venture is finally approved and announced --possibly in June.

William Dix, president of Ford Motor (Japan), said the transfer of its Jatco interests will boost Nissan's share in the transmis company to 65 percent from the present 25 percent and give it control over management. Toyo Kogyo, the third-largest Japanese car maker, will bave a 35 percent interest, up from its current 25 percent.

Ford did not disclose the terms of the Jatco deal, but the business daily Nihon Keizai Shimbun estimated it at about 6 billion yen ($28.3 million). Nissan, a major purchaser of Jatco transmissions, has been seeking control of Jatco for some time.

Is THE DINES LETTER still looking for a short-term DJI decline?

 Are interest rates heading down again, and should utility shares therefore be boucht?

Algeria has said it prefers to keep the gas underground if it canoot win in its drive for price parity between the calorie value of natural gas and that of oil.

The losers are: • Algeria, which has $2.5 bil-lion invested in pipelines, wells and liquefaction plants that spe-cialists estimate cannot be fully used for another three or four years for want of expensive equipment in an alternate receiving country. The cost is estimated at $3 million a day in lost revenue. · El Paso Natural Gas, which wrote off an investment of $365 million in gas-processing equip-ment and whose chairman, Travis H. Petty, has told his stockholders that further talks hold out little, if administration sees as unwarrantment • U.S. consumers in more than a dozen East Coast states who will pay for the $400 million regasifica-tion terminals at Cove Point, Md. In 1969, rumor had it that under the deal Algeria was to sell 10 bil-lion cubic feet of liquefied natural gas to El Paso annually for 25 years.

At that time, such a deal was not particularly attractive for Algeria, which was to be paid only 30.5 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. That barely covered Algerian amortization costs, but it promised to give Algeria a head start in then fledg-ling liquefied natural gas technology, train personnel and provide as sociated opportunities for Algerian industry.

Ace in the Hole

Furthermore, it was better than continuing the common practice of burning off natural gas produced during oil drilling because the tion was reliably reported to have been willing to favor a slight edge for Algerian gas, the Reagan team backed away from that stand at the final orgotiating session on Feb. 18 in Algiers.

Why the Algerians, who so forcefully urged Iran to release the U.S. Embassy hostages before the Reagan administration took office, failed to apply the same logie to the gas deal is unclear.

One possible explanation, which the Algerians strongly deny, is that they counted on some American generosity on the gas prices be-cause of their crucial role in negotiating the release of the hostages.

ly because of the world recession. But experience shows that gluts are short-lived. In any case, the United States imports only 5 percent of its natural gas needs compared with

And the Algerians are able to absorb the gas revenue losses be-cause they get premium prices on their light, pollution-free oil, half of it sold to the United States.

"It's the old story of greed on one side," one specialist said. "and a political slap in the face on the other."

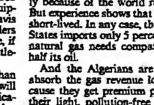

A Western European diplomat said: "The El Paso deal would have committed Algeria and the United States to two decades of commercial collaboration with all the potential industrial and pobli-cal spinoff that could entail."

Contractual deliveries of uranium oxides commenced in January 1980 and R7,7 million of the interest-free consumer loan was repaid by way of set-off against revenue.

Development in the Cooke Section proceeded at a much improved rate and resulted in the ore reserves increasing by 21% to 5,4 million tons at an average grade of 9,6 grams for gold and 0,213 kilograms for uranium per ton. These reserves were computed at a gold price of U.S. $550 per ounce compared with U.S. $375 per ounce in 1979 when the estimated reserves amounted to 4,4 million tons at grades of 8,6 grams of gold and 0,226 kilograms of uranium per ton. The problem, you see, is that audi- ences won't look directly at Chico if they have either Harpo or Groucho to look at, and since they always have either Groucho or Harpo to look at (or both at once) there's never time or space left over to take stock of what Signor Ravelli (or whatever pasta- based title Chico's acquired for the moment) may be up to. But this is not only untari, it's unin- telligent. We really do suppose that the glory of the Marx Brothers — a glory that is obviously going to go

We think of him, if we bother at all, as something like a straight man, a handy fellow for setting up Groucho's puns and Harpo's efforts to rest his knee in someone eise's available paw. He's a presence that comes and goes usefully but without altering our focus very much, a kind of steady occupant of our peripheral vision. We like him, but we don't feel the act would disap- pear if he did. In fact, he can walk right out of a beginning scene — as he does in "The Cocoannts," which I happen to have seen again recently— and leave the surreptitious theft of Groucho's tie, teeth and underwear to

Practice Becomes Too Realistic

For Tennessee Town's Firemen

COLLEGE GROVE, Teun. - Several volunteer firemen got a little more than they bargained for when they set an abandoned house ablaze to practice their firefighting techniques. High winds carried sparks from the burning building to the College Grove Presbyterian Church across the street and set it afire. The church burned to the ground.

The firemen, however, were able to prevent the blaze from spreading to the gymnasium of a nearby elementary school.

"They should be well-trained now," said Alfred Jaqueth, the school's principal.

'A Mistake'

Reutemann apparently ignored team instructions to drop back into second place and let his teammate, Jones, take the checkered flag. The result is a potential duel between the two teammates. "Now I know where I stand,"

Kuhn Challenges Red Smith On Tax Shelters for Owners

20: Knight 25, Edwords 20).

New York Times Service

EW YORK - Bowie Kuhn, the commissioner of baseball, has lenged an assertion made in a column by Red Smith, the New k Times sports columnist, that the ownership of a baseball n was "one of the coziest tax shelters accountants have yet overed.

1 a lengthy letter to the sports editor of the Times, Kuhn called claims made in Smith's column (IHT, March 25) exaggerated, sought to "demonstrate the fallacy" of the often repeated by tax-shelter theory."

.uhn noted first that the owner of shares in a baseball fran-"se "would be no better off from a tax standpoint than if he bought shares of a company like Ford in another industry of ginal profitability." Then, challenging the hypothetical financ-structure used by Smith, the commissioner said that both the erican and National Leagues had formal requirements that ild preclude the purchase of a team for $30 million with only a nillion down payment and $27 million of borrowings. .uhn said, "even using the column's numbers, however, the soed tax advantages are simply non-existent." Explaining, the unissioner made the following points:

First, a S3-million cash down payment to acquire the franchise art of the purchase price and not a deductible item.

Second, the assumed deductible interest payments of $4 milper year for the borrowed portion of the purchase price, reing in a tax saving of $2.8 million against other income for scone in the 70-percent tax bracket, would provide a tax saving 14 million over a five-year period. What was not pointed out is t $20 million in cash interest payments would be made over t some five years, resulting in a net coonomic loss after tax ing of $6 million. Finally, with respect to depreciation of player contracts, it was noted that upon the sale of the club at the end of five years the deductions for depreciation must by law be 'recaptured' under visions which are applicable only to sports and are more ngent than those that apply to any other business." Joncluding, Kuhn said: There are many reasons why a person y wish to own a major league basebail team, but tax benefits < Pot among them."

The Garden of Eden: Oil, Adam and Eve

Heinrich Apple-banm has been Buchwald researching it for years and here is what he has come up with: "I believe God did create Adam, and then made Eve from one of his ribs, but I can't buy the story of why they were driven out of the Garden of Eden."

"What do you think happened?" "Well, Adam and Eve were living happily in the garden when some geologists came along and suspected there was oil under it. They recommended that some test wells be drilled. Adam protested that the Garden of Eden was a perfect paradise, and oil companies would destroy it if they started putting up rigs on the property. Adam pointed out that God had

United Press International LONDON — The opening of "Cats," a musical by "Evita" com-poser Andrew Lloyd Webber to words from T.S. Eliot's cat poems, was postponed Monday because its leading female feline didn't land on her feet.

Actress Judi Dench was operated on over the weekend for an Achilles tendon she tore in rehearsals last week, Producer Cam- got sick to her stomach. eron Mackintosh said Dench will play Grizabella the Glamor Cat packing his few belongings. WASHINGTON - The battle set aside Eden as a place where man and woman could commune with nature. He said he would take

He accused Adam of being an environmentalist and trying to stop the human race from developing its natural resources. * * *

"We can't just let the oil sit there under the ground to protect a garden that only two people are using," he said on "Meet the Press." "Our job is to see that we use our natural resources for the benefit of all mankind. Besides, I have no intention of giving permission to the oil companies to drill all over the garden. I'm setting aside 20 percent of the land for drilling, and the rest will be kept in its present natural state."

Adam complained to God, who said, "The oil lobby is much more powerful than I am. There isn't anything I can do to stop them." The Interior Department auctioned off the leases, and it turned out there was not only oil but gas on the land.

The next people to apply for permission to dig were the coal companies. The secretary of the interior decided to let them go ahead, despite Adam and Eve's protests, because the coal had a low sulphur content. But he said low suiphur content. But he said he would permit them to mine on only 30 percent of the garden, which still gave Adam and Eve plenty of room to enjoy the view. Consolidated Edison decided to build a plant in the garden, be-cause it was cheaper than hauling the coal across the continent. Then

By Sandy Rovner Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Sir John Eccles answers the door of his temporary apartment on the Georgetown University campus, a sweater protecting him against the morning chill, his gray hair stubboraly tousled. He better resembles a knight of the realm some minutes later when, at the urging of his wife, he dons a tie and a tweed jacket

This gentle, patient man of 75, seems, at first glance, an unlikely warrior.

But appearances, as he says, are nothing more than electromagnetic vibrations. 'There's no such thing as taste or light or color in the world. These are just electromagnetic vibrations, ordinary photons. They're just purely physical things but in order to perceive them as light or color, or sound or smell, taste or pain - all this is created out of brain events by some mysterious process that we don't understand."

Then, with a rare bit of ironic anneement he says, "No one understands that. Even though some will talk as if they do. And part of my task is to try to expose these what you may say are confidence tricks that are put across by psychologists, philosophers and others, all trying to explain that they know everything or soon will. "And I," says Sir John, with the confi-dence of conviction, "I don't believe we've started vet."

Sir John won the Nobel prize for medicine in 1963 for his work in demonstrating the transmission of electrical impulses in the brain. He probably knows more about how the brain works than anyone, about its 10 billion (or so) elements organized into 3 million (or so) modules.

So when he says that his understanding of the brain and how it envolved does not begin to explain the genesis of human consciousness of self, one is compelled to listen.

Sir John has become a philospher, a metaphysician, drawing on the best thought of Western civilization to lead him, with philospher Karl Popper, to the concept he calls dualist-interactionism. His work of the past decade or so has led him to conclude that evolution alone cannot explain human awareness of self, that there must have been the intervention of some transcendental agency, of God, in the infusion into humans of soul. He hypothesizes that the brain and the mind are separate, interacting entities, only the former being the product of genetic evolution. Sir John was in Washington to deliver a series of lectures at Georgetown University

John Mc Downell. The Woster Sir John Eccles: Photons and soul

on "The Nature of Brain and the Problem of Mind." Dan Robinson, a professor of psy-chology at Georgetown, notes that "as with so many of his intellectual ancestors in the sciences. Sir John has tested the philosophical and psychological and broad ethical im-plications of his lifetime of study and discov-CTY.

Bot, Robinson said, "since we live in a time, to borrow from Sir Kenneth Clark, of 'heroic materialism,' where science has become a more severe orthodoxy than tradi-tional religions themselves, there is a certain suspicion and hostility against those who go beyond mere facts — judged in some quar-ters as acts of treason against science.

"There is now a fashionable agnosticism adrift in the sciences. But Sir John has the huxury of being a renowned scientist so he need not adopt this fashion as part of the membership requirements." "I am an evolutionist, of course," said Sir John. "But I don't believe that evolution is the final story. I believe it hasn't solved some very fundamental problems. "The genetic code and natural selection explain quite a lot," but not "how I came to exist. It doesn't explain even the origin of consciousness, even animal consciousness. If you look at the most modern texts on evolu-tion you find nothing about mind and consciousness. They assume that it just comes automatically with the development of the brain. But that's not an answer."

He has written, "If my uniqueness of self is tied to the genetic uniqueness that built my brain, the odds against myself existing are 10 to the 10-thousandth against."

The human, Sir John argues, is distinct from animals in possession of that elusive element of self-awareness, or soul. And his scorn for those who would demonstrate otherwise is unrelieved.

A psychologist io Washington state has re-ported that he has three chimpanzees who 'talk" (in sign language) and that therefore "himpanzees," Sir John has said, "suc-ceed, of course, quite well, at the lower levels of language expression and signal functions. They can ask for things and get them ... but they don't describe ... they don't come. argue. . . . They have no value system. They don't make moral decisions. We must never judge animals as if they were just badly brought up human beings." And, "They don't worry about tomorrow.

They don't know they're going to die." Sir John was born in Australia, studied at Oxford as a Rhodes scholar in the 1920s and, as he likes to put it, was "led along the neural pathways" by his professor and mentor, the poet-physiologist Charles Scott Sherrington, whose biography Sir John co-wrote in 1979. His most recent book is "The Human Psyche," a sequel to his "The Human Mystery." Both are collections of lectures delivred at the University of Edinburgh. He has five daughters and four sons from his first matriage, and 27 grandchildren. He and his second wife, Helena Tabonkova, live in Switzerland, and he lectures throughout in Switzenand, and he iterates introphotic the world on his philosophical and meta-physical hypotheses, drawing on break-throughs in his own field, in physics, anthro-pology, psychology, political science, and cit-ing the classics from Plato to Keats.

ing the classics from Plato to Keats. A forthcoming book, he said, will expand what he calls his "philosophy for humanity." "Two struggled all my life to understand the nature of being, the nature of myself. This is my primary reality. I haven't got any clear answers, but the mystery, the wonder has grown, and if people would only get a sense of the mystery of one's existence, this is essentially religious." In the epilogne to "The Human Psyche," he writes that the "great questions" must remain unanswered but "we nuestions" must remain unanswered, but "we have to be open to some deep dramatic sig-mificance in this earthly life of ours that may he revealed after the transformation of death. We can ask: What does this life mean? We find ourselves here in this wonderfully rich and vivid conscious experience and it goes on through life; but is that the end?" And later he writes, "I myself have the strong belief that we have to be open to the future. This whole cosmos is not just running on and running down for no meaning. . . . Each of us can have the belief of acting in some unimaginable supernatural drama. We should give all we can in order to play our part. Then we wait with screnity and joy for the future revelations of whatever is in store after death."

For years, the archaeologist Iris C. Love has been excavating the ancient Greek city of Cnidus, on the southwest coast of Turkey. Her most important discovery there was a temple of Aphrodite, in 1969. In 1970 she spotted what she is sure is the head of Praxiteles' statue the Aphrodite of Cnidus. Now she believes she has stumbled on an "extremely rare, superior reproduction souvenir copy of the Aphrodite of Cnidus" in, of all places, Hartford, Conn., at the Wadsworth Atheneum. "I was lecturing at Wadsworth, and was ushered to the auditorium through the storage basement" last November, Love said. "God only knows what creasures lurk there, I said, and 1 was invited to rummage around the basement the next day. In the third storeroom, I spotted a pair of marble feet jutting from a shelf, and I couldn't believe it. There she was, a copy of Aphrodite of Cnidus. We dragged her out, and I recognized it as a splen-did copy, probably of the sort [an-cient] tourists took home with them as a memento of their visit to the temple." Investigation showed that the 14-inch copy was a gift from the financier J.P. Morgan. * * *

Jean Sabion, who turned 75 last Wednesday, sounded and looked timeless in a concert of 33 songs at Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher Hall in New York. "A Return to Romance; Jean Sablon Chante [Anour" did indeed represent a return for the singer. Popular on radio in the United States in the 1930s and '40s, Sablon had not sung there in 20 years. He only seldom appears on television in France. He opened with "Une Girl c'est gentil," which he sang 51 years ago in a Paris revue with Mistinguett. The evening, a benefit for French American Cultural Services and Educational Aid, was produced by the pianist-singer Bobby Short and the jazz promoter George Wein, who talked Sablon into doing the show after hearing him on French television.

What's been described as a "sizable uproar" has erupted among members of the Overseas Press Club of America over the recent admission to membership of Al Goldstein, publisher of Screw magazine, After Goldstein was listed as an applicant for membership in the club's Feb. 15 bulletin, an organization called Women Against Pornography protested to Henry Gellerman, president of the club,
